A Special Issue on Alfred D. Chandler Jr.

This issue of Business History Review pays tribute to the work of Alfred D Chandler Jr. (1918-2007), for many years the Isidor Straus Professor of Business History at Harvard Business School. Professor Chandler was a Pulitzer-prize winning historian who transformed the field of business history. The nine essays in this issue assess the continuing relevance of his work to a number of areas of scholarship, including American history, organizational sociology, strategy, and international business.
